

On March 18th, 2023 TransportationCamp comes to Philadelphia for the sixth time. TransportationCamp brings together thinkers and doers in the fields of transportation and technology, but is not your traditional conference. In addition to talks and presentations from big names in the field, the heart and soul of TransportationCamp are sessions and activities suggested and led by attendees themselves.

History

The first TransportationCamp was organized by OpenPlans in New York in March 2011, followed later that month in San Francisco. Since then, TransportationCamps have been organized in cities across North America. In 2014, OpenPlans handed the baton to Mobility Lab, which works with local committees of transportation professionals to organize TransportationCamps in cities across the country including Los Angeles, Houston, Washington, Atlanta, Boston, Denver, New York, and beginning in 2018, here in Philadelphia.

TransportationCamp PHL Testimonials

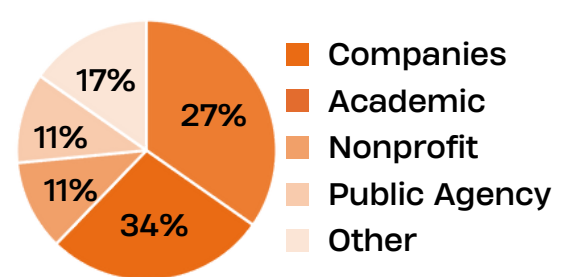

"During graduate school, Transportation Camp was a fantastic chance to participate in national transportation trends and discussions and its application within a local context. At every Transportation Camp, I cross paths with many transportation professionals who have opened opportunities for constant learning and professional growth."

-Rebecca Son, AICP, Transportation Planner at WSP USA Philadelphia (connected with WSP at TC PHL, became an intern, now full-time at WSP)

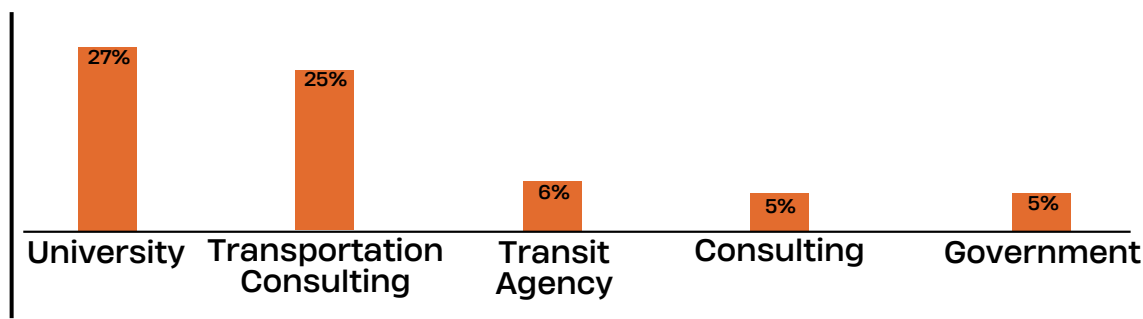

"I've attended Transportation Camp in DC and in Philadelphia and it's been a great experience both times. Transportation Camp is a fun & interesting way to explore a variety of different transportation issues and solutions with a wide range of participants from many different backgrounds. It's a unique event where transportation professionals and enthusiasts meet to share ideas, experiences, and perspectives in order to learn, network, & most importantly, have fun!"

-Heather Martin, AICP, Senior Lead Equity Consultant at WSP USA Philadelphia
